We're not done yet...

Welcome to the library's new addition! While the construction is finished, the renovation of the old building is just beginning. Everything from the old building (which had 72,000 square feet of space) is now housed in the addition (50,000 square feet). For the next 7 or so months we have to live in this smaller space.

Our goal in this transition period was to make our collection available to you. Does it look like a warehouse? Yes. Is it always going to look like this? No. Most everything is in a temporary location, shelves are jammed, there's very little seating, and the 1st and 2nd floors are not carpeted. This is temporary.

Renovation of the old building should be completed by early fall. Then we'll be able to use the addition as intended with wonderful seating areas, spacious aisles, room to walk around, and more. And the renovation will have all the amenities we're waiting for: meeting rooms, small group study rooms, a computer lab, vending/casual reading area, and a plaza adjoining the park, new service desks, new teen area, new furniture, new washrooms, and carpeting. So bear with us! In the end we know you will love the new and larger Wheaton Public Library.
